

Letter of invitation to participate in online survey
Nurses' Experience with Interruptions

Jonathan Gao, BArts(Hons)
Safety Science Innovation Laboratory
Griffith University
Nathan, QLD 4111

Dear nurse,

We are a team of researchers from the Safety Science Innovation Laboratory at Griffith University and Cognitive Engineering Research Group at The University of Queensland.

We are interested in your experience with workplace interruptions and are contacting you to invite you to take part in an online survey regarding workplace interruptions in your ward/hospital.

The study aims to find out how you define and manage interruptions, as well as your perception of current interruption-handling interventions.

We hope to use this information to inform the design of future interruption-handling interventions by providing designers with the perspectives of nurses. The outcomes of the research could benefit nurses' work, which in turn could benefit patients as well.

We have attached a participant information sheet with additional information for your perusal, should you choose to participate in the online survey. The ethics reference number for this project is: GU Ref No: 2017/342.

We thank you for considering our invitation.

Yours sincerely,

Jonathan Gao
HDR Candidate
jonathan.gao@griffithuni.edu.au